Logan is presently a costume design and technologies student at the University of Wisconsin La Crosse. Fascinated with the morbid and macabre, she's been working for live haunted house attractions since she was 13, making her own costumes since. She has experience across a variety of mediums, including dollmaking, maskmaking out of latex, worbla, and a variety of found and scrap materials, garment construction, and engineering and creation of puppets.

Other skills include lifecasting, sculpture, flat patterning of garments, draping of garments, proficiency with a variety of sewing machines, basics of constructing latex prosthetics, distressing and weathering, creature and character design + rendering, design of website graphics, linoleum block printing, and digital rendering. Examples of more 2D work is available upon request.

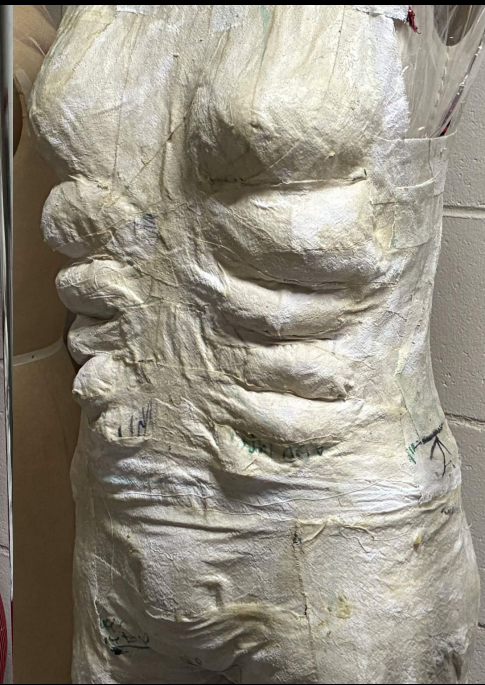

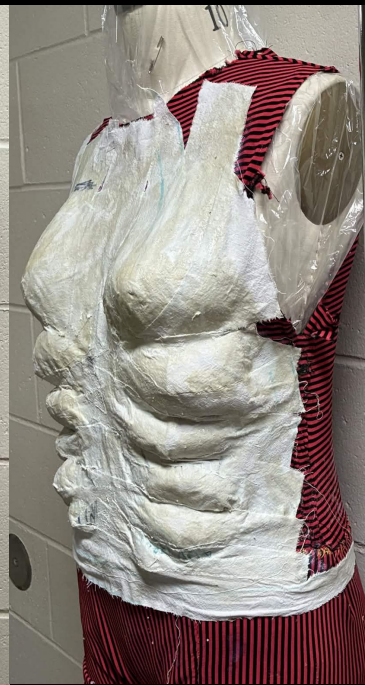

Since 2018, she has fronted a handful of personal businesses, beginning with the creation and sale of poseable art dolls under the moniker of Ineffabeasts, presently manages her own print + apparel shop and rendering commissions under the branding of Abstraktme since 2023, and has been doing freelance costume commissions and design work under the title of Live Dissection since 2022.

She aims to continue learning at all points in her artistic career to become as valuable of an asset to any shop or production company as possible.

BIPPY!

18-24" height

Like a hybrid of a rag doll and a flesh homunculus

Perhaps he has hair?

Head is hollow to allow puppeteer to stick their hand inside

Sticks for maneuvering his arms

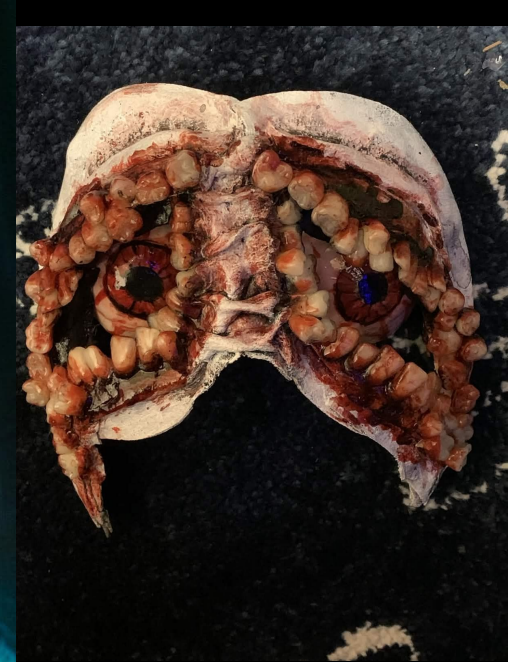

Tube socks are back in style!

Simplicity 8043 can be utilized for body pattern; hollow worbla head?

Polypellets in bottom of body + feet to give him more weight and cartoonish floppage
