Golden Legacy gears

These objects have witnessed numerous countries and about a century pass by. Anywhere and anytime they went, though, they were seen as an immaculate hero's equipment.

A golden halberd fitting a hero in shining armor. It is said the fur at its base has never been stained and that the golden metal this weapon is made of has never stopped gleaming. But looking closer, one could easily notice a multitude of little marks, scars of previous fights.

More used than his weapon itself, is the hero's encyclopedia written by his very hands. The monsters he fought were never foes to his eyes but beautiful creatures full of wonders, and for each and every encounter, he wrote a new note on them.

Bloodmoon gears

Mighty equipments from a genocidal noble vampire. Each of them is designed to gather as much blood as possible from each strike.

This elegant halberd can pierce through any armour, should it be natural or man made, to absorb its opponent's blood. The moon motifs were forged as a reminder of the night all Fi-Koës were murdered. Is it wielded as a pride or a burden?

Two daggers, for closer ranged combats, both are able to drain blood in their vein-like crystals. One was made for stabbing, whereas the other is better at cutting.

Whether it got collected via halberd or daggers, blood needs to be conserved somewhere and these vials perfectly suit the theme. Sealed with a strong black wax, there is no way these delicacies can get spilled.
