

While the Four Aces, Ink Spots and other visitors to the Vegas club play an average of three weeks, the "Magnificent 7" hopes to be around a lot longer.

It's the new show at Branson USA Amusement Park, a dynamic revue for all kinds of musical tastes overseen by Chisai Childs, who used to run her own Starlite Theatre, and is known for bringing Branson mega-star Shoji Tabuchi to town in the '80s.

Childs says Branson USA owner Bob Wehr was on a cruise when he saw a show with seven entertainers, "and they played all the music and sang the songs, changed costumes and even changed the sets. He loved the concept of a high-energy show and said to me there was nothing like that in Branson now.

So that's when I put the cast together."
